Potatoes Being Sold in Topeka Evidently Troubled that Way.

A new scheme which has the appearance of being more or less of a swindle is being worked on residents in the western part of the city.

Two well dressed men in a cart drive up before a house. One gets out and goes around to the back door with two or three nice potatoes in his hands. He an-nounces that he is taking orders for potatoes and would like to see the lady of

He urges her to place an order with him for potatoes, and if she does or does not, just as he starts to go he suddenly stops and takes a pair of gold rimmed eye-glasses from his pocket. "I found these in the car as I was unloading the potatoes," he says, "and you can have them for $1.50 if you want them." Whether the glasses are taken or not the potato man never again turns up.

WAS POPULAR JOURNALIST

Frank Hatton's Interesting Career in Business and Politics.

The news that Frank Hatton, editor of the Washington Post, had been stricken with paralysis, and the annonncement of his death a few days later, caused sorrow among a very wide circle of friends. Mr. Hatton was exceptionally popular with newspaper men, among whom he was generally accepted as a sort of standard for all that is honest, vigorous and independent. He was a hard fighter, but always a fair one, and had few personal enemies even among those who felt his bardest blows. As a politician he was a Republican of the stalwart stripe, but his friendships were not circumscribed by party lines, and many prominent Democrats were proud of his friendship.

Mr. Hatton was a native of Ohio and was born at Cambridge April 28, 1846. His father was for years editor of the Cadiz Republican, and Frank acted as devil in the printing office when only 10 years of age. He soon became foreman and then editor, but left his desk to enlist in the Union army in 1862, serving through the war and coming out with the rank of first lieutenant. In 1866 he and his father removed to Iowa, where they conducted the Mount Pleasant Journal until his father's death in 1869. Frank continued to edit the paper and was appointed postmaster of Mount Pleasant in 1874.

Then he went to Burlington and bought an interest in The Hawkeye, which he soon made an influential journal. He was made postmaster at Burlington by President Hayes, and in 1881 President Arthur appointed him assistant postmaster general. Upon the retirement of Mr. Gresham from the postmaster generalship Mr. Hatton was appointed to fill the vacancy. He was the youngest cabinet officer since Alexander Hamilton.

After retiring from office he edited The National Republican at Washington for awhile and subsequently the Chicago Mail, and in 1887 founded and for a short time edited the New York Press. Then he returned to Washington, and forming a partnership with Beriah Wilkins, formerly a Democratic member of congress, bought out The Post. which it is universally conceded he made the only thoroughly good morning newspaper that Washington ever had. Mr. Hatton leaves a charming wife and one kon.

A large and enthusiastic meeting of colored Republicans of the Fifth ward, second precinct was held on Saturday evening at the corner of 15th and Washington streets, for the purpose of select-ing among the many candidates, a candidate for Clerk of the District Court. The meeting was called to order and Wesley Hale was elected president and Robert Barton secretary. After several short speeches, unanimously agreed to support A. F. Chesney of the Fifth ward for Clerk of the District Court. The question of County Attorney was then taken up and Aaron P. Jetmore was unanimously indorsed as the candidate to support for that office. The meeting was a very interesting one, and it was agreed to adjourn to meet again on Saturday evening, and everybody invited to attend. R. Barron, Secty.

WHY THEY DALLY.

The System of Committees in Congress,

Takes Up Great Quantities of the members of this house." Time.

THE LOBBY IS PAST.

Old Style of Lobbying Has "Gone Out."

WASHINGTON, May V .- [Special.] --Now that Coxey has come and seen and been conquered our chief excitement is in speculating on what the senate will do with she numerous amendments in waiting for the Wilson bill and in watching the monotonous grind of the house on the slow dragging appropriation bills. Little by little the advantage gained by the early start of the Fifty third congress has been frittered away until now the condition as to results achieved is almost exactly what it was two years ago. On the 1st of May, 1892, the house had passed six of the regular appropriation bills, and on the same date this year it had passed seven, but not one of the regular bills had passed both houses and been sent to the president. On the same date this year only the pensions and fortifications bills had been reported by the senate committees, while the milltary academy, postoffice, sundry civil, District of Columbia and consular and diplomatic bills were still in the committee, and six bills were not yet finally acted upon by the house. Of these the legislative is alto be reported. In comparing progress to past it is curious to note how regularly the life, are mine, same movements by the majority recur, "If some in y the minority, no matter which party is in

Cause of Delay. First the chairman of the committee who has the matter in charge presents his bill and makes a speech of explanation, expect, that the whole house will be satisfled with the bill-eager to vote for it, in | truth; devoted to you." fact-and pass it with very little delay. Then the minority falls on it with venomous criticism, led usually by their mem-bers of the committee. The minority being now Republican, the standard charges are that the appropriations are sectional or niggardly and made up with a view to a big deficiency bill at the next session. It is then that the chairman of the committee, if he is anything of a fighter, comes

In the pending debates Chairman Joseph H. Outhwaite has borne the brunt of attack on the army bill. He is in the prime of life, active, quick at retort and fights at every point. He is perhaps the best parliamentarian the northern Democrats have and is well situated on the committee on rules. His best second is General Wheeler, who talks very much as he made a cavalry charge. Generals Black and Sickles are also active members of this ommittee, but the former has been absent a great deal, and the latter very rarely speaks in a running debate. A very interesting fighter on the Democratic side of this committee is Hon. John O. Pendleton. of West Virginia, who is a descendant of the famous evangelist, Alexander Campbell, and resembles him somewhat in men tal makeup. The liveliest opponents on the committee are General Newton M. Curtis of New Jersey and Hon. Ben F. Marsh of Illinois, the last very near the most inflammatory speaker in the house. On army matters he gets very red in the face and seems to harange the house as if addressing an audience of 10,000 people.

War Claims and Private Bills. On the navy bill the chief defense, of course, is by Chairman Amos Cummings, a good natured and solld fighter, and a chief opposition by Mr. Boutelle, whose well known style is the highly belligerent. Hon. Benjamin A. Enloe has done his hardest fighting on Fridays, for it is on that day that war claims and private bills have the right of way. Year after year he makes the same heroic fight to get certain moneys refunded which certain Tennessee ans were compelled to hand over during the war as security that they would not pilot guerrilla parties in their neighborhood. Again and again these claims have been favorably reported upon, again and again congressmen who fought in the vicinity have told their story to the house, and told it well, and occasionally one of the bills gets through, or a little matter of 20 or 30 per cent is allowed. Mr. Enloe is innocent looking, but tough, and never knows when he is completely knocked out.

Mr. Holman will have the same old fight on his Indian appropriation bill and will fight it in pretty much the same old way, but it is observed that he mellows rapidly with advancing age and desires as much as in him lies to live at peace with all men. There are always two sets of people very much dissatisfied with an Indian appropriation bill—humanitarians of the New Hampshire Blair class, who think many millions more should be appropriated for education, and far western men, who think the Indians are petted beyond all reason. There was a time before civil service reform became a fad that the borders always wanted big appropriations, and the philos ophy of it was expressed by a trader in Yankton, who wrote, after a successful campaign on the reservation, "We have met the Indians, and what was theirs is ours." It is different pow.

The Lobbyist Has Had His Day. While we amuse ourselves at this long drawn out, wordy war we note the interesting fact that lobbyists are very rarely seen in the house end of the capitol. this point an old member says: "The rapid change in that respect has been very re-markable, and the old style of lobbying has completely gone out. It's the rarest thing in the world to see a lobbyist come here and call out a member of the house. Their work is nearly all done at the hotels and so far as possible in a sort of social way. The big interests, of course, send agents, who come openly and announce their business and ask for a hearing. to the ex-member with a pull and the old fellow who has political influence in one's district, the hail fellow well met and the man who is strong with the delegation from his state—well, their day is post and gone. They are only useful in very little things, but when some great industry is to be affected by a tariff or appropriation bill then senators are sought at their hotels by men of national reputation and commanding influence. "We were all at sea about the tariff bill in the house until Havemeyer gave out that he was satisfied with the proposed sugar schedule, and then we knew it would pass. It is the same with everything. Men who have big interests go traight to headquarters, to the few who have the deciding vote, and never bother

JERRY'S POPULARITY.

Letters a Day.

Washington, May 7 .- Representative Jerry Simpson of Kansas, is still confined to his room. He has not been forgotten, however, for his mail is heavier since his illness than ever before. He receives on an average 300 letters a day.

Many of these letters are an expression of the Populist representative's popularity. He receives scores of letters from strangers, who write that they have heard of his illness and express the hope that he may speedily recover. The patent medicine men deluge him with circulars and communications setting forth the virtues of their respective nostrums.

Meanwhile Mr. Simpson's condition remains unchanged. He is not improving, nor is he growing worse, but his friends do not conceal their fears that his present illness may be prolonged indefinitely. He is greatly interested in the doings of congress, notwithstanding his enfeebled condition, and his Populist colleagues in the house and senate visit him daily, keeping him fully acquainted with all that is transpiring in both branches.

The Most Wonderin | Soprano in the World

May Coms to Topeka. Topeka is to have one of the finest musical entertainments of the year if a sufficient guaranty can be raised to bring here Miss Ellen Beach Yaw, the new American soprano whose voice has the greatest range in the world. The intention is to bring Miss Yaw to the Grand opera house for one night if possible and subscription papers were started out to-day to see if the money necessary could

The first names placed on the list were those of James B. Hayden, James A. Troutman, J. H. Stevenson, W. A. Crosby, Walter M. Noble and Dr. M. B. Ward. Many others were added this afternoon and beyond a doubt the list will include all the music loving people in the city.

In a column criticism recently published, the New York Herald says of Miss

The highest vocal range of a singer recorded by history was the contract of the same than the tory was that of Lucrezia Ajugari. zart says that in 1770 he heard this soprano range from A below middle C to C above the high C. It was a range of twenty-four notes. Ajugari could exe-cute trills on the high D. This is noted in the Encyclopædia Britannica as the only known instance of the kind. Miss Yaw can sing lower than Ajugari and three notes higher in the upper register.
